Early Life and Foundations

Joshua Miller was born on March 12, 1990, in the small town of Marietta, Georgia. Growing up in a family that valued creativity—his mother was a high school art teacher and his father worked as a civil engineer—Joshua was exposed to both the technical and artistic sides of life from an early age. He spent his childhood exploring the woods behind his home, sketching scenes, and acting out stories with his siblings. By the time he reached middle school, Joshua was already performing in school plays, often taking on roles that challenged him to think beyond the script.

His formal education began at Marietta High School, where he was a standout in the drama club.
